We have been closely monitoring the COVID-19 pandemic, as well as state, local, and federal updates. As of today, we will be conducting only remote telephone or telehealth sessions through Zoom for our counseling and wellness visit clients. We plan on implementing this practice at least through April 17th. We have also cancelled all trainings through the end of the month and likely through April. Either your clinicians will reach out to you or you may reach out to your clinician or our office staff to ensure that you are scheduled in.

For preemployment evaluations, we have modified our testing process and will be reaching out to applicants. We will be conducting the testing portion of the evaluations (computerized job suitability and psychological evaluations) in office. While in the office we will ensure social distancing practices, hand washing and limited contact. After testing is complete, applicants will be asked to conduct their interviews via Zoom with one of our evaluators. Applicants only need to have a cell phone or computer to complete these Zoom interviews. Again, we emphasize that if any applicant for a public safety position is sick or has knowingly been exposed to the COVID-19 virus, that they reschedule the in-person portion of their evaluation.

We will continue to respond for emergencies and post-critical incident interventions, as these events yield for no pandemic. We are committed to supporting you.

We know that it is important for our public safety agencies to continue to function during this time and we will do all that we can, within reason, to ensure that our services remain available. We ask for your patience and understanding as we try to accommodate ongoing services.

Sincerely,

Dr. Jaime Brower, CEO
